PNG RUGBY FOOTBALL LEAGUE LAUNCHES WEBSITE

The Papua New Guinea Rugby Football League (PNGRFL) today launched its website at its head office in Port Moresby.

In a milestone moment for the code in this country, the website will have in-depth coverage of all its programs from community rugby league to its academies around the country all the way to the Kumuls and Orchids.

PNGRFL CEO Stanley Hondina said this was a major achievement as rugby league in PNG had gained considerable momentum over the last five years, and it was important to have all the information readily available on the one platform.

“This website will serve as our main source of truth as we continue to grow the game nationwide. We have so many programs running that we felt it important to highlight and promote all of them so the public can know what we’re doing here at PNGRFL, especially in terms of junior development and our pathways.”

The website has been built in three parts with today all about the PNG Rugby Football League and its programs, while the second and third parts will be delivered gradually.

These include all the Kumuls, Orchids and Hunters player information in January of next year, then for the first time, an online payment portal will be released in March next year for memberships and merchandise purchases.

“This is something we are looking forward to in the new year where you can make purchases on our website for either memberships or merchandise,” said Hondina.

Details for the above will be released in the new year. In what is a first for sports in PNG, the public can now view the website at www.pngrfl.org.pg

The website was built by local marketing company Epiphany Limited.
